2019 NATCCO General Assembly sets Coops for "digital economy"

Iloilo City—Coops must, can, and will definitely go Digital!

More than 700 leaders from 189 cooperatives converged last April 26-28, 2019 at the Grand Xing Imperial Hotel for the 17th Co-op Leader's Congress and 42nd General Assembly. They came to learn, be inspired, and face the ongoing Digital Revolution.

Held at the Ballroom, the General Assembly with a powerlist of speakers who are authorities in their respective fields gave directions for co-ops to take the 'Digitalization" of the economy not only in the Philippines, but worldwide.

Keynote Speaker on the opening day was Rafaelita Aldaba, DTI Undersecretary for Competitiveness and Innovation. She said, "Traditional Cooperatives do not use digital technologies, but our aim is for the transformation to happen!"

For NATCCO Chairperson, Wilfredo Dimamay of MSU-IIT National MPC in Iligan City said: "The Digital Revolution is now here. We are in the thick of it. If we in the cooperative sector will not be involved in it, we will be as obsolete as the dinosaur. So if we want to be relevant and attract millennial into our movement, we must be part of it. Join us!"

NATCCO Chairperson Atty. Soledad Cabangis said: "The only permanent thing in the universe is change. It understandable we are sometimes afraid to embrace change, but it will be more scary if we will not face change. We have nothing to fear because we have good leaders and expert partners". Speaking at the Opening Ceremonies, she urged all participants to remain rooted in the Principles: "If gold will cause us to forget the Cooperative Principles, let's forget Gold!".

Kung ginto ang magiging dahilan kung bakit natin makakalimutan ang co-op (principles), kalimutan na po natin ang ginto.

E-Commerce Advocate, Janette Toral told the participants: "I am a big believer of 'organic marketing'. Instead of reaching out to people don't know, work first with the people that you know". She said referring to the Network of Cooperatives the NATCCO possesses, obviously urging leaders to take advantage of the linkages.

15-year-old Alessandra Daquila, Chairperson of Barbaza MPC

Laboratory Cooperative told the leaders why co-ops should invest in youth: "If all coops in the Philippines would invest in youth, imagine the possibilities. Young people can contribute so much! 60% young people in the populationwe can change the game! We are highly creative, energetic, and passionate but less ego. We are the digital natives so we are in the best position to navigate the diaital world. Invest in us. give us more meaningful roles, and you'll be amaze of what we can do!".

The flagship products of the NATCCO for co-ops to keeo pace with the Digital Economy are Kaya Payment Platform that allows members totransact using their cellphones, and eKoopBanker and eKoopBankerPlus which are the choice financial software to perform all co-op transactions.

Did you know?

The National Confederation of Cooperatives (NATCCO) is the secondary level organization of 312 cooperatives which include primary coops, federations and regional development councils across the Philippines. NATCCO was organized in 1977 by five regional training centers, then known as National Association of Training Centers for Cooperatives. In response to the growing need of primary cooperatives affiliates, NATCCO was converted into a multi-service national cooperative federation. In 2000, NATCCO underwent a transformation journey which resulted to its decision to become a two-tier cooperative and focus its services to financial intermediation in 2005.

COOP-NATCCO Party list gets one seat in Congress

COOP-NATCCO Partylist announced that it won a seat in Congress in the May 13 elections.

In a very impressive display of solidarity, cooperative members, leaders, staff, management and stakeholders voted COOP-NATCCO Partylist (CNPL) in the May 2019 Mid-Term Elections through voting, campaigning, or providing finances and logistics.

The Facebook Page of COOP NATCCO Party list said: "Our party leadership wishes to convey its sincerest gratitude for the all-our support and prayers in this mid-term election. Ranking #14 amongst all the 134 party lists that participated. With a final tally of 417,285 votes... assuring our party in the 18th Congress one seat, represented by the Congressman Sabiniano S. Canama".

The FB Page added: "This fresh mandate, allows us to share honor to all our party nominees from Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao—the men, women and youth in the cooperative movement who untiringly campaigned for the party. Our commitment to put forward the interest of the coop sector in the halls of the congress will be above all priority of COOP NATCCO".

The CNPL, since 1998, has endeavored to protect the interest of cooperatives in legislation, provided scholarships, pushed pro-farmer support, helped place co-op leaders in key government positions like the Cooperative Development Authority, United Coconut Planters Bank, National Anti-Poverty Commission, and more.

Nominees of the Party are incumbent Rep. Sabiniano Canama representing Mindanao, Reynaldo Gandiongco representing Visayas, and Divina Queme from Ilocos Sur representing Luzon.

CNPL Representative Nominee Reynaldo Gandionco (5th from the left) during the campaign period in Barbaza MPC Office San Jose Branch.

Canama is from Lorenzo Tan MPC, Gandiongco is from Fairchild MPC in Cebu, and Quemi is from the Nueva Segovia Consortium of Cooperatives in Ilocos Sur, and is concurrently a Director of the Philippine Cooperative Center (PCC), considered to be the apex federation of the Philippines Cooperatives.

The CNPL's greatest legacy is the passage of the Philippine Cooperative Code of 2008 (Republic Act 9520), which ensured and expanded the tax exemptions of cooperatives. It must be noted that then CNPL Representative Gil Cua succeeded in having the tax exemptions portions of the Bill passed by the Joint Congressional Committee while personally battling cancer and in the face of opposition from the Department of Finance.

RA 9520 redefined and strengthened the first cooperative code (RA 6938 & 6939) passed by President Cory Aquino in 1990.

Today, the CNPL continues to advance co-op interests in the House of Representatives. This is done in cooperative with other co-op bloc party lists and development-oriented legislators.

From 2016 to June 2019, CNPL had two seats in Congress, occupied by Rep. Sabiniano "Ben" Canama, former CEO of Lorenzo Tan Multi-Purpose Cooperative in Tangub City, and Dr. Anthony M. Bravo from San Isidro Development Cooperative in Sorsogon.

134 Partylists participated in the May 2013 elections. Other participation "Co-op Bloc" Party lists were "Ating Coop" associated with a faction of the Philippine Federation of Credit Cooperatives (PFCCO); AGAP composed of agricultural cooperatives cy Cong. Rico Geron from Soro-Soro Ibaba MPC in Batangas; APEC or (Association of Philippine Electric Cooperatives).

Bicameral Conference of both congress, on Senate Bill 2063 and House Bill 9051 An Act Re-organizing and Strengthening the Cooperative Development Authority COOP NATCCO PL as principal author

Only APEC, AGAP, and COOP-NATCCO will occupy one seat each in the next Congress which opened last July.

The NATCCO Board, composed of co-op leaders from all over the country met in Caoayan, Isabela on July 27, 1997 to establish the CNPL. On November 12, the group met again and commissioned Atty. Edmund Lao to prepare the Party's manifestation to participate in the election and to draft the by-laws.

In the 1998 elections COOP-NATCCO Party list garnered 189,000 votes or 2.2% of the total votes, giving the Party a seat in th 11th Congress, which was later occupied by Cresente C. Paez from Cebu.

In the 2001 elections, the party garnered 226,169 votes, or 3.1% of the votes. The seat was occupied by Guillermo P. Cua from Cagayan de Oro City.

In 2007, CNPL votes increased more than 50% to 409,812 votes. Cua again represented the Party in congress until his death in December 2008.

NATCCO Network Board Chairman, Jose Ping-ay from Ilocos Sur took over the seat, as he was the Party's second nominee. In April 2009, the Supreme Court increased the number of Partyl list seats in Congress and paved the way for CNPL to take a second Votes for CNPL in the 2016 Elections reached 678,905. In 2016, former Rep. Cresente Paez ran for Senator but lost.

The 1987 Constitution allots 20% seats in the House of Representatives for party-list representatives.

A group that is able to get at least 2% of the total number of votes cast in the party-list race is entitled to at least one seat. These groups can still secure up to two more seats based on a formula.

The Party list system has been criticized because of the participation of some Party lists that are perceived to be Communist or political fronts, and do not really represent the poor and marginalized.

Year of the Youth Through Cooperativism

In preparation for the Celebration of the 500th Year of Christianity in the Philippines, the CBCP has declared 2019 as the Year of the Youth. The occasion was opened in December of last year and will close in November 24 this year, the feast of Christ the King.

The year-long celebration is reflected in the theme Filipino Youth in Mission: Beloved, Gifted, Empowered. Activities both in National and Diocesan levels are aimed on at least four objectives—youth in formation, youth in community, church and society, youth in mission, and youth ministry and youth ministers.

Since this is the year of the Youth, I can't help but look back at what the Philippines' national hero, Dr. Jose Rizal, once said, "The children are the hope of our nation." With these words in mind, I being a cooperative movement leader believe that young children should be financially educated and molded to become future responsible cooperative

However, there are misconceptions. One mistaken belief is that cooperatives only exist for parents and that these are just a way for people to borrow money. A cooperative — especially in the Philippines and especially here in Barbaza — is actually an avenue for youth to learn about proper handling of money, an avenue for entrepreneurs to enhance their skills and an organization that caters to the needs of the marginalized sector. By empowering youth, brilliant leaders are created, leaders who have the heart and passion to serve others.

Cooperatives are principle-based enterprises that place people at the center of their business rather than the pursuit of profit. Because of this, cooperatives pursue an extensive set of values, namely, self-help, self-responsibility, democracy, equality, equity and solidarity, than those associated purely with making a profit. The democratic nature of the cooperative enterprise encourages participation, broadens ownership and fosters empowerment of youth. Indeed, young people often cite that it is the cooperative values and principles that make cooperatives attractive to them both as a means to create their own enterprises and as a potential employer who will provide "decent work".

Cooperatives are not systematically part of business development services offered by governments at the national or local levels. Similarly, the inclusion of cooperatives as a subject matter in school curricula at all levels is still insufficient. These gaps limit young people's ability to choose the cooperative option to doing business. To fill this gap, cooperatives should offer cooperative entrepreneurship training and education.

This commitment to education and training builds competence for members and employees allowing for job mobility and advancement both within the cooperative as well as skills that they can also carry with them to other enterprises. In some cases, this capacity-building can also be linked to support for cooperative start-ups in the form of business advisory services and access to finance.

Cooperatives can also facilitate school-to-work transition by providing on-the-job training to young people through internship or apprenticeship programs. In offering a combination of career-related work experience and advanced employability skills, cooperatives must invest in the youth, offering first exposures to the world of work and breaking the "experience trap"

For young people still in school, combining work experiences and school-based education through school cooperatives introduces young people to the cooperative model of enterprise while providing exposure to the skills needed in running a business. These cooperatives can be made up of students in educational institutions (primary, secondary, technical schools, universities). They can be organized as consumer cooperatives making school supplies, uniforms and books available at reasonable prices. Laboratory cooperatives can also offer basic financial services for savings and micro-credit and in doing so introduce basic financial literacy. Young people run the enterprise and gain valuable preemployment experience by exposure to skills and entrepreneurial culture.
